The enemy have not renewed their attempt to cross the Lower Plave but are concentrating their efforts in Brenta and the Piave, where fighting has been incessant since the 17th. The encouraging feature is the rally of the Italians, who are not merely resisting stupendous attacks, but are repeatedly and effectively counter-attacking.

Departments and the members of th George presided.

Welcoming the United States mission, the Premier said that the purnine how the United States could bes co-operate with the Allies. While everything was urgent in a war of thi tind, two matters stood out of superio and equal urgency, namely, man power at the fronts and shipping.

He emphasised that the collapse of Russia and the reverses in Italy made it more imperative that the United States should send as many troops as ossible at the very earliest opportunity and he was anxious to know how soon the first million could be expected in France.

Anxious for New Ships

British shipping was wholly absorb ed in war-work and, assuming the sub-marine situation does not grow worse the easing of the position of the Allie depended on the date that America's six million tons of shipping promise six million tons of shipping promised for 1918 was launched. He did not doubt that the accomplishment of America in the matter of shipbuilding

America in the matter of shipbuilding would astonish everybody.

Among matters of secondary importance, Mr. Lloyd George mentioned aeroplanes. Everybody realised that the command of the air is vital and almost a essential in the battleline as the command of the sea.

Americans powersed in an unusual degree the enterprise and daring necessary for the creation of successful airmen. The American climate specially lent itself to the development of an air-service because it was clearer and more equable than Great Britain's.

British Supreme Court Reserves Mischievous Lie, He Says, Due Judgment In $68,000 Suit Over s.s. Alma

The action for $68,319 brought against Messrs. P. Heath & Co. by Messrs, Shun Lee & Co., in connection was concluded in the British Suprem Court yesterday and judgment was re-served by Sir Havilland de Sausmarez,

Mr. Heath was in the witness box a

Chief Judge.

Mr. Heath was in the witness box a short time stating that he had no expert marine knowledge and had purchased the Aima on speculation. Mr. Gardner, chief engineer, was recalled and testified regarding the repairs made on the ship at Dainy, following cancallation of the charter, stating that these were not necessary for bring ing the vessel back to Shanghai.

Mr. C. H. Wright, counsel for the defendants, in his address to the Court said he would submit that the real reason why the charter was cancelled was not because of the unraworthiness of the ship but because the charterers had made a bad bargan. It appeared that the charterers lost money during the six weeks the vessel was under charter, and, find ing they had made a bad bargan, they looked for a way out of it. There was no doubt that they went into the charter in a very reckless manner. No real lusiness man would make a charter with such exceptions as were found in the charter party in this case, and the important factors which would arise in the minds of the charterers would be the speed of the vessel and the coal consumption, the vessel simply are up coal, and consumed 70 odd tons on her trial run.

Mr. Wright commented on the fact that the plaintiffs had only called one expert witness, and went on to point out that the onus of proof, as to whether the vessel was seaworthiness was supported by a sufficient weight of evidence, which he submitted it was not. The warranty of seaworthiness applied at the time of the commencement of the voyage, and if the vessel became unseaworthy subsequent to that time the defendants were not responsible.

Mr. N. C. Home, in reply, said his main submission was that the facts, that time the defendants were not responsible.

Mr. N. C. Home, in reply, said his main submission was that the facts, as recorded in the logs and other documents, spoke for themselves. They showed the record of the Alma to have been a unique one, and the witnesses on the other side were practically unable to dispute that fact. It was a necessary inference that the vess-1 must, before she left Shanghai, have been in a defective condition, which could have been ascertained. The defects which showed themselves most of all were in the telemotor seering gear and in the Weir pumps, and it had been brought out in evidence that the chief engineer of the vessel had never had any practical experience of either. Mr. Home pointed out that the surveyor also was without practical experience of the telemotor gear and with Weir pumps.

Indications yesterday were that the display this year will be one of the most comprehensive and colorful of the society's history. Glowing masses of the big blooms—in wide variety—were among the earliest placed exhibits and testified to the activity and success of the local gardeners.

"Some very fine lots of chrysanthemums are already in," said Mr. D. MacGregor, Honorary Secretary of the Society. "and there are a great many more yet to come. We shall have a very fine display this year."

WOMEN MOSTLY BRAVE

Graybeards Among Those Who Return Again For Their Turn In Trenches

Paris, September 24.—The stone woman of Strasbourg, seated high over the entrance to the Gare de l'Est (railroad station) daily watches the women of France crucify them-selves anew. She stares-down into the courtyard of the gare; she see coming up the broad avenues, debouching from the many streets that lead to her feet the French soldiers returning to the front at the end of their furloughs. They are leaving their homes to take up once again the task of driving the invader from the task of driving the invader from their land; of restoring to France the fair province which the stone woman typifies—Alsace. Accompanied by wives, mothers, children, fathers, brothers, they ap-proach the barrier through which they must pass to board their trains. Many of their comrades trains. Many of their comrades who were with them when last they left for the front dld not come back for a furlough. They had received their final discharge at Verdun, Craonne, on the Chemin-des-Dames, on the Alsne, at a hundred altars consecrated by their blood from the seacoast to the Swiss frontier. Which of the many passing the barrier to-day will get their discharge before the time for the next furlough arrives?

The stone woman stares back unanswering into the eyes of the women straining to read the clock under her feet, which tells them how soon the good-by must be said—the good-by that may be forever.

A workingman—as the little family that accompanies him betrays. He bears on his shoulder a tiny girl, perhaps two years old, who laughs gleefully at her wonderful ride this beautiful morning. His wife, perhaps a seamstress or laundress, with the competent look characteristic of the women of her class, holds one of her little daughter's hands. The father and mother of the soldier, bent and old and dressed in rusty black, complete this group.

"Going To The Country."

They are apathetic. Perhaps the realisation that they too are approaching a dark threshold robs the departure of its poignancy. "Father is going to the country," says the mother as the little girl protests at being shifted to her arms. The farewell kisses exchanged, the big fellow starts for the barks, gathers

The men are not all young; there are graybeards among them who belong to the territorial regiments, and whose wives have passed the meridian of life. Some are accompanied by grown daughters, but not the black band on the father's sleeve tells the story of their discharge on the field of battle.

But there are boys who are still too young to be offered as sacrifices to the war god. It is September, the month when the youngsters are returning to their schools.

She knows her fluffy blue and white bonnet is the one she wears on fete days and she wonders to what delightful playground in the country she is going. Ten days at home had lifted from this family the cloud of anguish that settled over it when the only son was first called to the colors. Now it is about to settle down again. The mother holds tight to one arm, the youngest sister clings to his disengaged hand. His father walks behind. There are a few pitifully short moments to spare before the boy must leave. The father looks at his watch. There is no need for words—the boy kisses his mother tenderly, his sisters, his father and then again, his mother.

Tung Wen Institute Wins South Fukien Championship

liest of weather and without the ustomed breezes at Ian Bu Teng a we double last year's assembled to the South Fukien Championship

See the South Fukien Championship Games. The xames were so slabcrated this year that two days were fully taken up. On both days the attendance was spiendld and the crowd was yery enthusiastic over the showing made by the boys. Every record or last year and the previous years was broken. In breaking the 220 yard dash is points were fully and the condition of the Y.M.C.A. also shattered the Far Eastern Champ on ship Games record of 23 3/5 seconds by making the distance in 23 2/5 seconds. He also ran the 100 yard dash is 10 2/5 seconds.

Since October last year the Tung Wen hoys have had the benefit of the coaching of Mr. Bradshaw who divides his time between Tung Wen Institute and the Y.M.C.A. Before last year thus year the boys of this school have shown great enthusiasm and improvement and have carried off both banners. In addition to securing the banner Tung Wen also turned out the individual champion for the year, Tan Cheong-goh, who secured 12 individual honors. The fact that his points were made in 6 different events shows that his all around ability deserves the prize. His near-est opponents were Lee Giau-seng of Talmage and J. C. Huang of the Y.M.C.A. each with two first places to their credit (6 points).

The success of the meet was due to the second time by Tung Wen Institute team composed of Saw Heeng-chuan, Otan Slong-him, Ng Kay-eng chuan, Otan Slong-him, Ng Kay-eng c

The success of the meet was due to a great extent to the South Fukien Championship Games Committee composed of Mr. T. M. Elliott, General Secretary of the Amoy Y.M.C.A., who is Executive Secretary of the committee, and men chosen from the different schools and colleges represented. Mr. Huang, Principal of the Government Middle School, deserves great credit for his splendid work in helping to finance the games. With the fine grand-stand and a bamboo fence around the quarter mile track the soldiers were able to keep the field clear and the audiences of 3,000 on the first day and 6,000 on the second day were pleased at the improvement. Much praise is due the officers at the fort who kindly helped by providing the soldiers and also gave the audience a very good taste of the athletic ability of the soldiers in a half hour series of stunts. The up-to-date grand-stand and fence are the results of Mr. T. M. Elliott's experience in other years. He is the "Father of Athletics in Amoy." Results Of The Games

A German prison camp in England, a city that seems to have sprung up overnight in the manner or the American "boom towns," is shown. Prisoners are seen at play, reading in the library, in the theater, in the hospital, at their work and merely working. It makes one realise the complexity of the organisation of caring for war prisoners. And it strikes one also that the German prisoners have a contented look about them.

Tuan Out Again

GENERAL Tuan Chi-jui has again resigned the office of Premier, and this time, it is generally believed, he will "stay" resigned. As he had previously given up the War Ministry he is now entirely out of office. Thus the way is open for a compromise between the two political factions in China commonly differentiated as the North and the South, properly the Reactionaries and the Progressives

It is to be hoped that President Feng Kuo-chang will make prompt overtures for peace. General Tuan never has had a popular following among the Chinese people and when he lost control of the army his days of power were numbered. President Feng, on the contrary, ha friends and supporters all over the country who will view, and probably rightly, the present turn of irs as a personal triumph for him over Tuan, who, without doubt has been the strongest man in Peking since the demise of Yuan Shih-k'ai.

President Feng by moving quick ly now for peace with the Kuomintang will still further entrench himself in the esteem of the people There was a spirited revival of business in Shanghai yesterday, es scially in the yarn market, which is generally interpreted as evidence that the business element among the Chinese believes that the crisis is past and that there will be no more fighting.

Almost, if not the very last, ac tion of General Tuan, as Premier was the suppression of The Peking Our cable does not indicate for what length of time it is to be prohibited from publishing either in the arms loan business but now that Tuan is out of power the vigorous and outspoken Gazette days; but from usually reliable probably will not remain silenced Chinese sources quite a different for long. It was for exposing the ed Arms Alliance deal which Tuan was negotiating with Japan that its former Editor, Mr. Eugene Chen, was put in jail and late driven out of Peking. The present acting Editor of The Gazette, undismayed by the fate of Mr. Chen,

Our cable of yesterday intimated that The Gazette was suppress ed at the instigation of the Janan and there may be some truth in this suggestion but Tuan prob ably required very little urging. Last Monday The Gazette published on its editorial page the following in large, black type, set across four

They will no longer shoulder the collective responsibility of a body that is being used to barter away the nation's resource and to assist the spoliation of the country by the Japanese."

Our own correspondent in Peking, writing on Monday, discusses this and other phases bear ing on the resignation of Tuan. He says that at the Saturday conference in which Tuan was induced temporarily to withdraw his resignation, he took the position that the defection of the Yangtsze Generals practically amounted to a vote of want of confidence in his leadership and that therefore there was only one course open to him—that of resigning. Tean favored coercion of the South; his Generals would not obey his orders in this direction, hence his usefulness was at an end.

Turning to the reported Japanese activities, our corresponden says: "It is persistently stated, but no confirmation of this can be obtained from any official sources that the Japanese legation was very active the whole of Saturday and yesterday buttressing the Prime Minister's position. In quarters hostile to General Tuan it is openly stated that he owes his retention in office to the strong suasion of Japan, brought to bear on the President. It this be the case, then the country need feel ao surprise that the Tuan Cabinet is disposing of so many valuable concessions to the Japanese. The Japanese authorities deny that they have brought any pressure to bear version of affair

"If there has been Japanese intervention, official or unofficial, then it has been enployed at a very inauspicious moment, for the Japanese news agencies have been during the past three days taking a very strong line with respect to the Lansing-Ishii notes. Hotel keepers in the world's show places are usually the most reliable barometers to register the rise and fall in the tide of visitors. When they smile, rub their hands and become expansive in their intercourse with mere guests—that means their houses are full and they are thinking of raising the rates. But when you see them morose, indifferent to their personal appearance—amenable to argument when you show to your own satisfaction why certain reductions should be made on your bill—that means bad harvests. The war, however, has upset this, as it has many other things, and the hotel barometer must now be read in a different light. In the first place, probably one-half the hotels in France are either closed or only partly open. Most of those closed to guests are being used as hospitals. On the Champs Elysees, between the Rond Point and the Arc de Triomphe, at least a dozen well known hotels display the Red Cross or some millitary hospital fag. Why Evolution Is Not Evident To Everybody

By Garrett P. Scryiss

"Have scientists proven that evolution of things earthly is still m progress? If so, why do we see no visible signs of it in the present day offspring of the bird or monkey, or other living creatures?"

Luther Burbank's astonishing success in the mainfullation of plant life should suffice to convince anybody that at least two of the fundamental which differ from the type of their own species in such a way as to be better suited to the circumstances of life in their time, have an increased chance of surviving and of perpetuating their peculiarities through their offspring—that is selection.

Of these four vital principles which are concerned, by their interaction, in the process of evolution, the one that is the most essentially mysterious, or rather the most persistently difficult of explanation, is variation. An altogether satisfying interpretation of variation, of its cause and origin, has not yet been found. But we know that it exists, just as we know that heredity exists. One of the chief reasons why many people are puzzled by evolution is that they do not, or cannot, look at it from a sufficient mental distance to take it all in at one view. To ask why evolution is not plainly visible all around its at the present day is as increasonable as it would be to expect to see the planet Saturn moving in its orbit as you see an automobile passing on the road. Saturn travels, on the average, six miles per second, or more than 500,000 miles in a day, but it is so far off that those 500,000 miles, stretched against the background of the sky, make a line so short that the naked eye cannot perceive it.

Evolution demands as much room and proceeds on as vast a scale, in time measure, as the revolution of a distant planet does in space messure. We may even enlarge the basis of the comparison and liken the process of evolution to the journey is performed at the area of mahably 400,000,000 the process of evolution to the journey of the solar system among the stars. That journey is performed at the rate of probably 400,000,000 miles a year, but the only landmarks around us by which we can become sensible of this tremendous motion are the stars, and their remoteness is so immense that an advance of 400,000,000 miles causes an apparent change in their positions so slight that delicate instrumental observations alone can make it visible.

If every second of our lives were cord of evolutionary development for a hundred thousand years, and run it through the exhibiting machine at an accelerated speed sufficient to compress all that space of time into a few hours.

of time into a few hours.

It is this immensity of the field of science, in time as in space, which best exhibits its uplifting and broadening effects upon the mind. The delight of the mind is in speculation (speculor, "to behold"), but there must be something substantial for it to see, else its speculation is mere moonshine. The old schoolmen, who once monopolised what was called education, had nothing substantial to show or to look at, and a view from And there my love lies dreaming. show or to look at, and a view from their high points was simply a star-ing into mental fogs.

But from the outlook stations of science one's gaze extends across interminable spaces which are filled with realities that become clearer and better defined as the means of observation are improved. No branch of science leads you to a loftier viewpoint than that offered by the study of the principles of evolution. There you learn to cast aside little standards of measurement and to the great three.

ittle standards of measurement and to use great ones.

But, while in its broader aspects evolution can only be apprehended by acquiring the ability to take vastly extended views, and virtually to make the mind, which can use its physical instrument for only three or four score years, comprehend the real and future, yet there are exceptional cases in which the evolutionary process seems to be so hastened that it covers in a leap a space that, in ordinary circumstances, could only be traversed by age-long steps. Examing the first of this are seen in the "mutations" of De Vrees, when a species are be transformed almost in a be transforme

Coastwise:—Our Northern market has continued fairly active during the past fortnight and the demand seems likely to increase:—New-chwang is expected to close about the end of this month and it is doubtful as yet whether Tientsin will be able to be kept open, as it was last Winten, or not owing to the silted state of Taku. Bar caused by the Chibli floods. As regards the South, the floods in Siam and consequent damage to crops has had a weakening effect on the Southern market.

November

1s. 4.30 @ 4/21 for a case of sellers taking advantage of a temporary lull in freights to replenish their stocks; however, the great dearth of tonnage continues everywhere and that will be one of the main factors in the determining of prices for next year, as we see no possible chance of tonnage becoming easier intending Contractors must be prepared to meet an advance of perhaps a hundred per tractors must be prepared to meet an advance of perhaps a hundred per cent or even more as gompared with this year's prices.

Kaiping Coal:-Owing to short Cod Kaiping Coal:—Owing to short supply of tonnage stocks are low and mandarin with a prospect of very high rates for recharter the price of coal must show a high immediate advance. It is very difficult to obtain tonnage in any direction, and it is doubtful whether the available steamers will be sufficient to meet all the demands of the usual Kaiping market. It will therefore be a case of "First come, first served."

NOTICE.

The Company begs to draw the ttendon of its consumers to the blowing points:

chlowing points:

METERS. It is necessary during the winter season to protect the meter from frost not only to avoid damage to this apparatus but also to provide against the interruption of the water supply to the house.

It is enough to fill the box containing the meter with dry straw to protect it from deterioration and to avoid the necessary repairs, which are always costly and d.fficult, all the more so at the present time as it is almost impossible to obtain the spare parts required to carry out repairs.

STOP-COCKS. Many old installa-carry out repairs.

STOP COCKS. Many old installations do not yet possess stop-cocks, and in case a pipe bursts whether from the water freezing G whether from the water Treezing or from any other cause, it is impossible to stop the flooding of the house until the arrival of the CAMPANY'S employees to cut off the water which may often be delayed if there should be many such accidents at the same time.

Gate open at 2 p.m. each day. All profits will be handed to the French Munic pal Council (which is defraying all expenses), for French War Funds.

Tea and other refreshments served in the garden.

Auction of plants on Saturday even-

With a stop-cock installed, clos-ing. ing it is enough to stop immediately all passage of water.

The COMPANY samestly advises its consumers to insist that their contractor should place a stop-cock after the meter.

This measure will, however, evidently not be efficacious unpany will be closed from the 3rd less the distribution of the water has been judiciously established and if there do not exist any lodgements where the water could remain in spite of the opening of the drain-cock.

The Transfer Books of the Company will be closed from the 3rd December to the 11th Dec., 1917, both days inclusive.

By Order of the Board,

In giving this advice to its consumers, the COMPANY, which does not undertake any private installations, wishes it to be well understood that it assumes no responsibility for any accidents whatever which might happen although the stop-cock should have been closed and the drain cock onesed and the drain cock M.
